

Whole Education Development and Innovation Hub

Sharing knowledge and expertise to promote innovation, secure funding and improve our collective impact on young people.

Introduction and Rationale

There is a massive focus on improvement in the school system, with not enough being done in the innovation field, especially in the area of young people's wider development.

The Development and Innovation Hub brings together innovative schools, funders and Whole Education Partner Organisations with a desire and capacity to work in collaboration to tackle some of the big challenges our schools and the wider system are facing through whole education approaches. The Hub enables schools at the leading edge of practice to effectively pilot and test new approaches through funding provided by the Network and to share their results with the Whole Education Network.

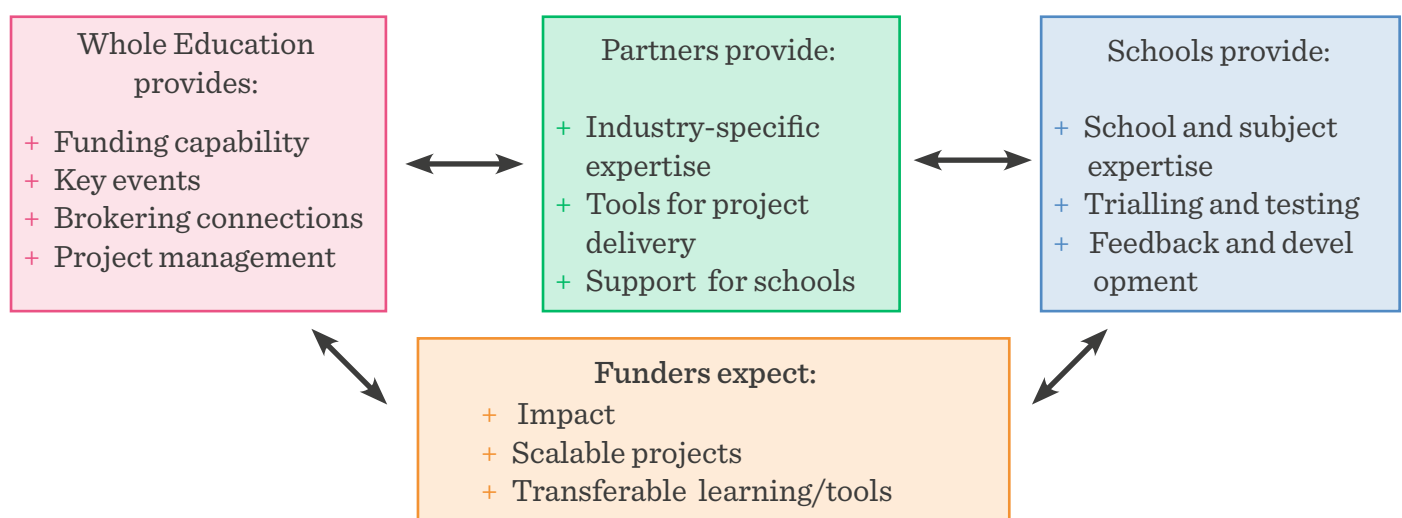

How does it work?

Partners and schools come together at Development and Innovation Hub events to share priorities and generate ideas, with an eye on current funding opportunities. Members then collaborate to:

- + Generate pilot studies and learning
- + Run programmes/projects using shared expertise
- + Produce impact reports and analysis
- + Retain improved practice and plan next steps

By knowing each of our partners' and schools' strengths and priorities, the Whole Education team can provide the link to the right members at the right times.
